

Educator Edition: Advocating for Your Black Child

A Class for school based providers

Join Educator Edition: Advocating for Your Black Child (A4YBC), a free 2-part online series designed for educators serving Black families (Elementary - High school) with Mental Health, Neurological, and/or Learning Differences. Adapted from our successful A4YBC Parenting Class, this edition offers access to the culturally responsive, trauma-informed information we share with Black families.

By participating in this class - you'll not only gain invaluable insights into the obstacles and challenges faced by Black families, but also acquire practical strategies and tools to effectively support and advocate for your families. Topics covered include:

- Accessing appropriate academic services and support within the public school system
- Understanding and navigating systemic racism in professional settings
- Learning about behavioral health and neurological differences in Black children and teens
- Implementing Social Emotional Learning (SEL) techniques
- Utilizing community resources effectively
- Overcoming obstacles to effective support and advocacy
- Exploring alternative and allopathic treatment methods

Free Online Class.

Space is limited.
